SAE an accredited provider

SAE Creative Media Institute is now a self-accrediting higher education provider following a decision by the higher education regulator.

The Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency has authorised SAE Institute to accredit courses in performing arts, visual arts, graphic and design studies, communication and media studies, computer science, and other creative arts.

SAE Institute is a unit of education company Navitas. Its new status allows it to accredit its own courses in these areas independently of TEQSA.

SAE chairman Peter Ryan said the self-accrediting status was “testament to the institute’s high standards of academic excellence and governance”. “SAE is one of only 12 independent higher education providers to achieve self-accrediting status,” he said.
